

fresh starts registry

Divorce Guide:

10 Questions to Ask a Mortgage Lender When Refinancing Your House During a Divorce

Refinancing your house during a divorce can be a complex and emotionally charged process. To navigate this important financial decision successfully, it is crucial to ask the right questions. Making informed choices can help protect your interests and ensure a smoother transition as you move forward. In this article, we will explore the key questions you should ask when refinancing your house during a divorce and why it is essential to seek clarity on these matters. By understanding the importance of these questions, you can confidently make decisions that align with your needs and secure a stable financial future. Here are 10 questions to ask your mortgage lender when refinancing your house during a divorce.

Speaking to: _____
(name) (position)

Is refinancing the house a viable option for me during the divorce?

What is the current interest rate and how does it compare to my existing mortgage?

What are the costs associated with refinancing the house?

Can I qualify for a mortgage on my own?

How much equity do I currently have in the house?

Will refinancing affect the division of assets during the divorce settlement?

Can you help me understand the terms and conditions of the refinanced mortgage?

What are the potential benefits and risks of refinancing?

How long will the refinancing process take?
